

ARISTOTLE- The Nature of Happiness

Happiness is an activity of the soul in accordance with:

Philosophical Wisdom- scientific, disinterested, contemplative, pure reason. Human must lead contemplative life but not monastic one.

Practical Wisdom- ability to make practical judgements consistent with "the good life."

Material Conditions- good friends, riches, political power, good birth, good children, good looks, not ~~very~~ short, no manual labor.

very

Must have excellence in both types of wisdom for full Happiness